

WHERE ARE THEY NOW?

Christian Mammina – Lindenhurst High School Class of 2010
(HVAC)

Christian graduated from Lindenhurst High School and completed the Wilson Technological Center's two-year HVAC training program in 2010. While at Tech, Christian worked hard and easily finished with above average grades. He was a member of both SkillsUSA and the Renaissance Society.

Christian fondly remembers Mr. Castro and the fact that he was able to spend a lot of time with him one on one. He is grateful for that time as it was a very big part of his learning experience. According to Christian, the HVAC program was great because as a high school junior, he did not know much about the industry. He wanted to learn something new and Wilson Tech fit the bill.

He was fully prepared when he applied to the HVAC program at Suffolk County Community College where he is doing extremely well learning more about what he loves. In addition to a tough course load in college, Christian is currently working as a part-time custodian at Lindenhurst High School.

His future plans include starting and running his own HVAC business right here on Long Island. He is on the right path to success and is excited about learning every day. He is currently planning a trip back to Tech to visit Mr. Castro, the campus and the current students. Christian and his family are grateful for the quality education he received at Western Suffolk BOCES.
