Help Your Company Grow by Providing Workplace Literacy

“Our country must understand the workforce changes that are occurring at an accelerating pace. We need to focus on the skills gap within the work force; and the future of the workplace.”

Labor Secretary Elaine Chao.

“Learning will increasingly need to be a lifelong activity.”

Alan Greenspan.

For more than 40 years, instructors from Western Suffolk BOCES have been helping Long Island businesses develop literacy programs that improve the basic communication and computation skills of their employees. BOCES Workplace Literacy programs have been effective in expanding the basic math and English abilities of workers to help companies improve productivity.

Well-planned training programs can reduce employee turnover that eats a hole in your profits. Call today for assistance in planning a training program that will help prepare your employees for future growth with your business. Basic literacy classes are offered at no cost to your business through NYS literacy grants.

Investing in Your Employees Pays Off

Learning to speak, read and write English and improving computation can:

- Foster better understanding between co-workers and a sense of camaraderie that builds teamwork

- Spark awareness of upward mobility and develop career-oriented goals
- Improve on-the-job attitudes and technical skills
- Support decision-making and increase critical thinking skills
- Boost employee’s self-confidence to accept additional responsibilities

Our Training Program Builds Teamwork

Cooperative exercises develop teamwork and extend communication lines to help overcome language barriers. Employees will learn to value their colleagues as partners in their own learning.

Training can help your employees set higher career-oriented goals and build a company prepared for future growth.
